Citations

Citation Guide: Use ACM, APA or IEEE citation. Do not use MLA citations. Whatever you choose, stick to that one.

- Examples of ACM, APA, and IEEE are all there:
  https://dal.ca.libguides.com/csci/writing/examples

  From the website above, I have screenshotted (below) a portion of the site where you can reference how to cite your paper. You can select "ACM", "APA", "IEEE" to see examples.

Once you select a style, keep all of your references in the same style.

How to write a Reference for a

Webpage (html document, URL significant)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

Website (with many pages, URL significant)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

Wikipedia
There are no examples because this is not a scholarly resource. It is not an appropriate reference for academic papers.

Article in electronic Newsletter or Magazine (html document, URL significant)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

ACM Digital Library (pdf document, URL not relevant)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

IEEE Electronic Library (pdf document, URL not relevant)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

Journal Article with DOI (Digital Object Identifier)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

Journal Article (multiple formats online, URL to a directory)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

Journal Article (multiple formats online, URL to a file)
Basic information needed See an example using: ACM | APA | IEEE

Journal Article (from a print source, no URL)

- More on ACM Citation: https://www.acm.org/publications/authors/reference-formatting

Below is an example of how your title page should look like:

- Below is an example of what your title page should look like. In the bold text of the first 2 lines in the name of the paper (depending on your topic or how you choose to name it the length will depend.)

- In the center, the first line is your full name

- The second line is the department and university

- The third is the course name

- Then the instructor's name

- Finally, the date

The title page is in APA format - Follow this guideline for your cover page. Font: Times New Roman Size : 12pt